Officials on the Alert. The officials of the marine hospital service are on the alert for this oriental visitor and ready to take heroic measures upon its first appearance in this country if it should unfortunately appear here at all. They publicly scout the idea, but the strictest regulations are enforced in the insper tion of vessels leaving or arriving from suspected ports.

The Russian government has recently idopted a curious device by which it is toped to eliminate the introduction of the plague by rats, which have been one of its well known that in the east the rats have carried the plague from port to port, when teriological examinations have shown the germs to be present in dead and living rats, and the inference has been that they helped to spread it among the human bengs in their vicinity. The British govern-sul Fee at Bombay. The plague had its the latter part of 1896. Since then it has continued without interruption, penetratshow that there were 4,300 deaths in Bom-bay province alone. Its progress in south-ern Maratha this year has been even more remarkable. It assumed an epidemic form in the city of Poona, over 100,000 inhab-itants, and has raged there this year. itiants, and has raged there this year. Poona, on account of its supposed sanitary condition, high elevation and dry heat, with a climate like an English spring from May to November, has been made the home of the Bombay army and the residence of the government during the monsoon season. Up to the present time Poona has had 23.331 cases and 17.809 deaths. The epidemic during August and September was at its height. During the week ended Sep-tember 2, 1889, there were 1,086 deaths from plague, and on Monday, September 4, there were 117 cases and 110 deaths. This gives some idea of the mortality of the dread dis-ease.

Western India now being threatened with famine on account of the failure of the monsoon to produce sufficient crops, it is feared that the present season will witness #### further ravages of the plague. Symptoms of the Plague.

About all that can be said of the plague from a physician's standpoint is that it is an acute infective fever accompanied with certain symptoms, such as swelling of the glands under the arms and in other parts of the body, dark discoloration of the surface, acute pains and speedy death. It is caused by a known germ organism, which multiplies with great rapidity and spreads the subtle poison through the body. This much we do know, but beyond this we are not much better prepared to combat it than were the physicians of the seventeenth cen-tury. About the only treatment that has o far been discovered is that of inocula-ion, and although its results have been ex-remely important its effect is rather to build up a wall against the disease in the system than to combat and eradicate it. The plague microbes are capable of living and multiplying only while they have access to supplies of organic nourishment. They are able to pass directly from body to body or to remain alive and even to multiply outside the body. Thus there are two ways in which the plague may travel. It may creep from patient to patient in direct chain, or it may use places where suitable decaying substances are to be found a temporary links in the chain.

The Remedy.

An anti-toxine, or serum, first prepared by Prof. Haffkine as a plague inoculation, called Haffkine's prophylactic, is now being used in Bombay and western India with remarkable results.

This serum is prepared by first taking the plague bacilli, or the young germs, from person affected with the plague and cultivating them. These microbes are killed by artificial means and a high degree of heat. From these dead germs and their poisonous excrements is produced a fluid which is pelleved to have acquired the power, when believed to have acquired the power, when injected into the human system, to render the blood immune from the attack of plague germs and to neutralize their effect. The injection of such a poison has the effect of an anti-toxine and prevents the system from nourishing the plague. A dead plague germ being inoculated into a person plague will not follow. A person after son, plague will not follow. A person after having one attack of the disease is rarely liable to a second. The person first inoculated is subject to symptoms of the plague. In vaccination for smallpox a living germ is dealt with, whereas in plague inoculation lead seeds only are injected. Experiments are now being carried on at the laboratory of the government house, Parel, Bombay, where further discoveries are expected to perfect this plague preven

Strangely enough, inoculation is exceedingly unpopular among the natives of India. The government has had great labor in persuading the Hindoo mind of the efficacy of Haffkine's serum against plague, and at the same time its utter harmlessness in every other respect.

The Hindoo is suspicious that the dead germs and their toxic excreta may be of animal rather than of vegetable substance, which would make the injection of the fluid into their bodies a religious offense.

The measures generally relied upon in the dry season have been entire evacuation of infected villages and hamlets, segregation of the suspects, and a thorough disinfec-tion of all infected places. In localities where the outbreak grew virulent in the monsoon evacuation was impossible, but inoculation has been extensively tried and strikingly demonstrated the protective power of the serum.

At first the people failed utterly to understand the use of segregation. To the masses infection and contagion had no meaning. Nothing but the splendid confi## dence of the people in the British govern-ment could have made sanitary measures possible in the broadcast and rapid manner in which it became necessary to use them among the untrained and ignorant millions. Inoculation Statistics.

Owing to the enormous population of the city of Bombay, and also the fact that many plague cases were suppressed, secreted, or returned under fever and other causes, it is hard to give general statistics of the plague inoculation just described. There are a few returns from the up-country inoculation, however, which are of in-

At Kirkee the plague broke out among the Royal Artillery followers. They were living among far better conditions than many villagers, and a cordon had been drawn around their place. Six hundred and saventy are a proposed and around their place. seventy-one persons were inoculated and 859 not inoculated. Among those inoculated there were thirty-two attacks and seventeen deaths, giving a mortality of 2.05 per cent; while among the uninoculated there were 143 attacks and ninety-eight deaths, or a mortality of 11.4 per cent.

At Releaum among the men of the 26th At Belgaum, among the men of the 25th Madras Infantry, after all of the Sepoys had been inoculated, there were only two attacks, both of which recovered, whereas before the insculation than the second before the inoculation there had been sev-enty-four cases in the regiment. At Ganishkind, among the servants At Gamshkind, among the servants of the governor of Bombay, in a certain quar-ter, there were 324 persons inoculated and 300 not inoculated. Fourteen cases of plague occurred in that quarter, and every one of those cases occurred among the 300 who were not inoculated. Bacteriological and chemical analyses of the atmosphere and ground, etc., are being made in these infected places, results of which may be of extreme interest and in-

Men of Mark in Politics, Art and Literature Who Never Married. From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Samuel J. Tilden was the richest American who ever entered public life and remained single to the end of his days. His persistent celibacy was remarkable, for, unlike Sir Thomas, Mr. Tilden was born with money, and thus from his youth was considered eligible by the mamas of many roung women. No republican of half Mr. Tilden's prominence has gone through life without marrying, but, including David Bennett Hill, who seems to be a confirmed bachelor, democracy's rolls show a noteworthy triummocracy's rolls show a noteworthy trium-virate of the distinguished celibates, James Buchanan, the only bachelor President, be-ing the third member thereof. Buchanan is understood to have refrained from taking a wife because the girl upon whom he set his youthful affections was obdurate. He is said to have regretted the single state to the day of his death. Mr. Hill, on the other hand, is reported to be a bach-elor from choice. Literature has furnished a long string of names to the list of eminent bachelors.

Possibly the best-known unmarried man of letters today is Henry James, the novelist. He maintains stoutly that the artist, no matter what the medium of his expression, should remain single, on the ground that the petty cares and carpings of do-mestic life tend to wear on delicately ad-justed nerves and exhaust the mental fiber er of statues, a composer of music, a singer or one who amuses the people from the

John Greenleaf Whittier was a bachelor, though not from the same cause as the bril-liant fiction writer mentioned. Whittier eyed, red-cheeked New England giri for wait for recognition. She promised, but waiting is wearisome; before recognition forgot him as a lover, and was married to

Omar Khayyam's quatrains, was a oach-elor, and there was a romance in his life, much like the one which saddened Whittier's, but there was little the which they had in common. The cellbacy of Charles Lamb was full of pathos, for he remained single all his life that he might care for his sister. Venerable John Burroughs, nat-uralist as well as writer, and one of the most charming of men, has never married. that a romance caused his bachelorhood. The only literary bachelor who is ac-knowledged to be a hater of women is the English poet, Algernon Charles Swinburne. His sentiment appears to be based upon the fear that a woman of little culture would be dull beyond description as a life partner, and the conviction that the clever, well-informed woman is the least attractive of her sex.

Only one noted Protestant divine has been a bachelor. He was Phillips Brooks, who finished life as bishop of the Episcopal Church, and seemingly possessed every quality desirable in a model husband. The cause of his remaining single appears never to have been understood, even by those who were closest to him. He did not avoid the fair, nor has any one been able to re-call a romance in his life. In his student his passionate fondness for children was remarked often. His letters to some of his juvenile friends, published a few years ago in one of the magazines, were models in their way.

The bachelorhood of Sir Isaac Newton was a puzzle to some of his contemporaries, but others knew he remained single solely on account of his mother. He thought the world of her, and her affection for him was unbounded; but her maternal love was marred by jealousy, and whenever her son thought on marriage or evince I a passing interest even in a pretty face she wept and wrung her hands, and managed some-how to check true love's course. He final-ly told her he would give up all notion of marriage as long as she lived. After her death he found himself too leeply absorbed in his scientific work and too mature to think of matrimony.

RAILROAD MAPS OF AMERICA. The Process of Making Them is Not

From the Chicago Inter Ocean. One marked effect of the progress of American arms, the extension of American supremacy in other lands and the expansion of the foreign market for American goods has been a more general demand for maps of foreign countries. Heretofore map making for general, and not for technical or topographical, requirements has been a feature of the publishing business of the United States, and in cheap, accurate, portable, up-to-date and comprehensible railroad maps the United States have long been at the head of all countries.

The process of railroad map making is not so simple as might at first appear. The map maker takes a flat copper plate and smokes the face by contact with the flame from a gas burner. Then he covers it with composition of wax and gum. To make the composition even over its surface the plate is heated and it is then ready to reeive a transfer of the draughtsman's work on tracing paper. The back of the paper is covered lightly with chalk and this chalked surface is laid upon the wax composition which covers the copper plate. Then the engraver with a steel pencil goes over the lines of drawing. As the steel point moves over the paper the drawing is copied on the

The engraver then goes over the chalk ines, cutting out the wax composition, and the next feature of the work is the markng upon it of the names of the cities and tations and the typographical symbols used in map making, such as a circle for the county seat, a circle with a Maltese cross in the center for the state capital, and an asterisk for steamboat connections. These typographical marks are made with ordinary type, which fit into a hand stamp.

The name of each place, in whatever form of type is desired, is stamped upon the soft surface of the composition layer, and when there has been completed by this process a copy of the drawing, a copper electrotype of it is made, from which the map is There are fully 500 railroad companies in the United States requiring maps of their line or system, as the case may be, for distribution. Some of these maps are for advertisements; some are circulated for the convenience of travelers and contain on one side time tables; some are framed at railroad stations; others are sent to hotels; others are in demand by drummers, shippers and freight agents, and still others are sent abroad.
